THE NEW COMMANDER.

A Few Facts Regarding his Army Record, Style, &c.

The writer hereof, having had the pleasure of participating in the most decisive Indian campaign west of the Rocky mountains, wherein Gen. Geo.
Crook commanded, believes that the readers of THE CITIZEN will now be interested in the following facts which he respectfully submits:

Crook is a native of Dayton, Ohio.
Went through the West-Point School with the class in which Sheridan graduated. He was at once sent into the Pit river section of California—about the year '51. Unlike too many of the young men placed in similar circumstances, instead of drinking, gambling, etc., he immediately set about making the best possible use of the rough school to which he was transferred. He was in one uninterrupted fight with the wily enemy through Oregon and northern California, where-ever his services were required, for ten years—or until the great war of the country was inaugurated. In this he soon rose to the rank of Major-General of Volunteers. The records of the Department show that the part he played there was a continual round with him of tough, grinding war—from the undecisive bush-whacking up to the handling of an army of forty thousand men. After the close of the conflict—in the winter of '65-'6—he was duly assigned to the regular army, as Lieut-Colonel of the 23d Inf., of which Gen. Jeff. C. Davis is Colonel.

The case of Arizona calls to mind the Idaho industrial hall; the newspaper criticism of incapable military officers; the thousand-and-one disagreeable circumstances incident thereto,—so graphically to our mind, that it convinces us that there is such a thing as "history repeating itself" with a vengeance. Grant was general of all the armies, and Halleck commanded the Division of the Pacific.
Halleck was undoubtedly the best posted military officer on everything pertaining to "this coast" that ever served in the army. He was a man well-schooled in business, outside the army, and thoroughly in accord with the true wants of the citizen and country. Through those two chief officers, Crook was properly assigned, and he was never interfered with until the tedious and thankless task was most effectually accomplished. We say thankless for there are few Indian wars that more than a small fraction of the entire people are interested in and care to understand.
God only knows the extent of the gratitude felt toward Crook by the pioneers of Idaho, Nevada, Oregon and Northern California. Being quite familiar with the matter from beginning to end, and having an acquaintance with the man acquired in such a way that we know to the letter what we are talking about,—we could write a volume on the subject that would be of interest now, at least for the many important facts alone incident thereto—however plainly stated.

Crook is so unpretending in his way that others have reaped the promotion he deserves—but that is neither here nor there at present. A few points in his character and style must suffice to give our readers an idea as to his actions toward himself and his public duties. He is a perfect salamander in the way of human endurance; he is the best skilled person with a rifle we ever knew—is a very Nimrod as a hunter and can catch a mess of fish with any professional in the land.

When on a scout, he can live on three meals in one day or one meal in three days as contentedly as an Indian, whose character he has at his fingers' ends in its narrowest and broadest conception. He nevertheless insists that the more he learns of their "ways that are dark," &c., the less he seems to know the Indian for certain. He has great respect for the native ability of the native, and has as tender regard for his welfare as Grant could desire.
There are various ways perhaps of making peace with savages as with civilized people—the most perfect peace being generally effected on earth as it was in heaven, by the most perfect war. No man lives who has a keener sense of justice to all races and conditions, or who tries more to do justice on all occasions, than Crook.
He is a man who will take all responsibility in this Indian business.
Should the Apaches capture his animals, which they would be bound to more or less do, he would procure other animals at once if obtainable in the country, and take the chance of Government allowing his claim; would follow the enemy out of the country and fight him on foreign soil, if success were to be assured no other way.
His favorite policy is to get one part of the enemy to fighting the other, and the first thing he will do in Arizona will be to organize as perfect a system of scouts as possible—whether of Papagoes, Pimas, Navajoes or Apaches, and we shall not be surprised if the Indians of Arizona are made to nearly settle the difficulty themselves. Crook is a very companionable man, though one of the most earnest and honest, and no citizen need feel sort of guilty of an impertinence when in his presence or when asking him a civil question. If he should find it necessary to disagree with a contractor, he will not fly off the handle and write a flaming report in tawdry rhetoric against mankind and affairs in general.
There will be as little said as possible about business on all occasions. There is not one grain of shoddy in his physical and mental make-up, or in his deeds. He will like everybody just as well, if they never ask him to champagne and brass-band accompaniments, for he drinks nothing stronger than water, nor "uses the weed," while his actions will speak for him.

It is hoped that he may live and have health to "fight the battle through" in his own way. There will be no question about the peace that will follow. It will doubtless be the final one with the American Indian, for it seems to be narrowed down as if Arizona were the "last ditch." We feel the greatest personal satisfaction in the compliment paid him by the President, in singling him out for the occasion. This feature of his assignment is certainly extraordinary, and shows that there is yet a God in Israel.

THE Deseret News (Salt Lake) of March 11, had the following item, to which the attention of our readers is called. We learn that Gehrenbeck was well known in central Arizona.
Where is he now?

Herman Gehrenbeck, a German, formerly a resident of Prescott, Arizona, from which place he moved to Fort Mojave, from thence to St.
George, Utah, and, in 1866, to this city where he was last heard from by his parents. In a letter to them, in the above year, he stated that he was about to start for his home, in Germany, since which time no tidings have been heard of him. Any person who was acquainted with him or can give any information concerning him will confer a favor by communicating with this office.

YESTERDAY, six large freight trains arrived here from Arizona. They are the property of C. T. Hayden, Esq., a prominent merchant of Tucson, and are here to load some 50,000 pounds of general merchandise now stored in the warehouses of Pauly & Sons.
They will leave on Monday or Tuesday for Fort Yuma. [S. D. Union 5th.

THE San Diego Union of May 3 says that "Mr. W. Richard, of the noted Arizona House of W. Richard & Co., arrived from San Francisco yesterday en route to Sanford, Arizona.
He has been purchasing a very heavy stock of goods."

Indian Department.

OFFICE SUPERINTENDENT INDIAN AFFAIRS, Arizona City, A. T., April 17th, 1871.

SEALED PROPOSALS, in Triplicate, will be received at this office, until twelve o'clock M. on Thursday, June 1st, 1871, for supplying the following articles, —VIZ—

250,000—Two hundred and fifty thousand pounds net (more or less) Flour, of standard superfine quality.
50,000—Fifty thousand pounds net (more or less) Barley, of good merchantable quality.

75,000—Seventy-five thousand pounds net (more or less) Beans, of good mer-chantable quality.

fairs.

The Beef Cattle will be subject to the following conditions, viz.:

Not to weigh over Five Hundred Pounds net per head; to be weighed if practicable, and from the live weight of the animal thus ascertained, its net weight to be determined, by deducting therefrom fifty per centum. If weighed, not to be fed or watered, from six to nine hours previously. It impracticable to weigh on scales, the herd to be separated and arranged into three equal lots, according to their apparent weight, as heavy, medium, and light cattle; an average animal selected from each lot, killed and dressed, as prescribed by the U. S. Army Regulations, and the average net weight of the three animals thus selected, killed and dressed to be accepted as the average net weight of the herd. The examination, and determination of the acceptability and net weight of the Beef Cattle, to be by a Board composed of a special Indian Agent on duty at the Reservation, an officer of the army, selected by said Agent, and a person selected by the Contractor.
